

Improving the Health of Your Buildings: How WELL Do You Know Your Buildings? (Webinar)

October 16, 2020 ☐ 10:00am - 11:00am

As today’s world has shown: our buildings have an instrumental part to play in human health. With the help of the new WELL Building Standard, which uses up to date research and information on infectious diseases and wellness, Labarre has been able to create a space and assist with organizational change to have the first WELL-Registered building in the state of Louisiana. With this knowledge, we would now like to share with you ways to create an environment that promotes clean contact, improves air and water quality, manages risk, creates organizational resilience, and more.

Who Should Attend:

This webinar will benefit facility managers.

Webinar Speaker:

Rachel Brown is an Architect that focuses on Project Optimization, she sees every project as an opportunity to brighten the way people experience their everyday surroundings. Rachel’s extraordinary design talents make her an invaluable resource for unique solutions to routine problems. In addition to earning a bachelor’s degree from Louisiana Tech University, she is also a LEED Accredited Professional in Building Design and Construction (LEED AP BD+C) and a member of the AIA. Rachel’s commitment to a sustainable future extends far beyond her professional life—outside of work, she is a Girl Scouts troop leader. With this position, she fosters positive, early exposure to STEM for the female leaders of tomorrow.
